

Protect your greatest investment with First Title.

Properties come in many shapes and sizes: houses; units; townhouses; and vacant land. They're all unique but share one thing in common, a "Title". Even though you have a great conveyancer there may still be hidden issues with the property.

What are some of these hidden issues?

1. Do it yourself (D.I.Y) renovations that have not been approved by council. Australia's obsession with renovation has fuelled this risk in recent years. The last thing you need after an expensive property purchase is a letter from council demanding rectification works on your property.
2. Structures or fences built on the incorrect property boundary. The majority of conveyancing transactions are completed without a survey report because they are expensive.
3. Fraudsters are getting smarter at separating people from their money. What options do you have if someone mortgages or sells your property without your knowledge?

Real life claim examples

None of these issues were identified when our customers bought their property. They were faced with these expensive issues after they completed their purchase.

$140k paid for full rebuild of dining room, deck and garage which had been built without council approval

After settlement of their home, our customer was issued a notice by council stating that the dining room, deck and garage were built without approval. First Title paid for the structural engineering report, demolition and rebuild of the new structures. Total payout $140,000.

$33k paid for encroachments identified in survey

After purchasing a home in NSW, our customer identified multiple boundary discrepancies via a survey report. One neighbour requested relocation of a fence that encroached on their land, while our customer also suffered significant net land loss due to encroachment of another fence within the property boundary. First Title paid for external legal advice, 50% of the fence relocation and compensation for land loss. Total payout $33,300.

$1,820 paid for outstanding council rates error

Shortly after settlement, it was identified that our customers' conveyancer had made an honest mistake at settlement calculating the outstanding council rates. First Title paid the outstanding rates to our customer. Total payout $1,820.
